APPEALS.

UNITED DIOCESES OF DUBLIN, GLENDALOUGH, AND KILDARE.
CLERGY STIPEND AUGMENTATION FUND.
AN APPEAL.

To all classes of the community who have suffered from the increased cost of living, the clergy is no exception. Their incomes are even more affected as pew-rents are fixed.
It has been calculated that in normal times, for a clergyman to bring up a family and to maintain his position in society, an income of £400 a year, in many cases, less than £300 per annum, but under present circumstances the strain of living has become so great that some measure of relief has become necessary.
The Archbishop of Dublin has already on two occasions in the Joint Diocesan Synods called attention to the grave difficulties under which the clergy are living, and this appeal is made with the approval of the dioceses action has already been taken.
There are no Diocesan funds available for this purpose, and the sum raised by the Stipend Augmentation Fund will only provide a small palliative quite inadequate to meet the present need.
A Committee consisting of the lay members of the Diocesan Council of Dublin, Glendalough, and Kildare, has been formed for the purpose of making an appeal to the laity throughout the United Dioceses, and they now ask for a donation of £1 (or less than £1 if they prefer) to assist in the distribution among Minor Incumbents and Curates.
With this object in view the Churchwardens in each parish are requested to receive subscriptions for the purpose of enlisting their sympathies and obtaining additional support.
It is necessary to emphasise the fact that the scheme is for the whole United Dioceses, and therefore parishes whose pew-rents produce income in excess of those for whom the appeal is made are asked to make liberal subscriptions to enable Clergy are in a less enviable position.
Captain Wade Thompson and Mr. S. P. Wilmot have consented to act as Joint Treasurers for the Fund, and subscriptions should be sent to them direct, or through the parochial organisations of the Diocese, in the Bank of Ireland, College Green, Dublin, to the account of Clergy Stipend Augmentation Fund.

The Western Front.

It is now more than three weeks since the Germans, held up before Compiegne by the local counter-offensive action of the French on their right, broke off their last offensive in the Valois, and there is still no sign of the renewal of their effort. During this period, on the other hand, the Allied Armies under the supreme command of General Foch have been carrying out a remarkable series of local operations. All these operations have been successful in their purpose of improving the tactical positions of the Allied line at those points on the front which are most vulnerable to attack, and in one case only have the advantages obtained been neutralised by a subsequent counter-attack. Most of these operations, moreover, have involved the capture of prisoners in not inconsiderable numbers: the roll during the past week reaches the respectable aggregate of more than five thousand. The latest of these affairs has been a highly successful action undertaken on the British front south of the Somme by Australian troops, assisted by detachments of American infantry and supported by tanks. This has resulted in the taking of fifteen hundred prisoners, and has advanced the British line to a depth of more than a mile, bringing within it the village of Hamel, the wood of the same name, and the wood of Vaire. The village of Hamel and these woods flanking it occupy important high ground immediately covering the approaches to Amiens from the east, and their loss will be a serious embarrassment to the enemy if they should contemplate a new effort in the direction of the Somme estuary.

Tactical successes of this kind on the British front, and others like them recently obtained by the French and Americans on the front between the Oise and the Marne, are a novel feature of this year's campaign. Since the German offensive was launched in March the Allies have never before in any interval between the phases of its development undertaken tactical offensive actions with such persistency and on so large a scale. These actions are the mark of a gradual change in the strategic situation. They do not imply that the enemy do not still retain the initiative, for they do retain it; they do not imply that the enemy do not still enjoy numerical superiority, for they do still enjoy it. They do imply that, as the balance swings slowly back in favour of the Allies, the Allies gain in confidence and consequently in relative freedom of action, while the enemy suffer decreasing confidence and increasing embarrassment. The Germans began their offensive in March with a numerical superiority of some 350,000 men, accentuated by their possession of interior lines and better railway communications. Since their offensive began there have been landed in France more than twice that number of American troops; so that, if we assume losses to have been equal on both sides—though there is every reason to believe that the enemy's were considerably heavier than the Allies'—the Germans' superiority in total numbers has already disappeared. In part their effective superiority remains, for the majority of these American troops are not yet ready to be put into line, and their divisional organisation is far from complete. The balance, however, has begun to swing against the enemy. For the present they retain an effective superiority, though it is smaller than that with which they opened the campaign; in a very few months effective numbers will be equal; by the beginning of next year the preponderance will be on the side of the Allies.

In these circumstances we may ask the first question which General Foch used to propose to his pupils at the School of War: "What is the problem?" The problem for the Allies is simple. It is to keep their Armies in being and as favourably disposed as possible until the return of numerical superiority to their side enables them to recover the initiative and pass in their turn to the offensive. The problem for the enemy is not so simple. At the outset of their offensive it was simple enough—the use of their great superiority in order to force a decision in their favour. Now, however, the campaigning season is half over. The Allied Armies, with a restricted area of manœuvre, it is true, but intact and with undiminished moral, still confront the enemy; and the enemy have less advantage in numbers at their disposal than they had at the outset. They have made a great effort to regain their full numerical superiority by throwing the Austrian Army into the scale, and that venture has been an abject failure. The Italian victory, as the Supreme War Council declares, has been "an invaluable contribution towards the eventual success of the Allied cause." The Germans have sufficiently expressed their opinion of it by summarily replacing all the Austrian high command by German officers. The enemy, therefore, have less superiority and less time to achieve a decision than they possessed at the outset. They have to contemplate a permanent inferiority after the end of this campaigning season.

What is their problem? It is a choice between two things. Either they must still press for a decision this year at all costs, but with the knowledge that if they fail, they will have crippled their defensive strength for next year's campaign; or they must conserve their strength with a view to the requirements of their defensive campaign next year, in which case they must abandon the effort for a decision and restrict the remaining phases of their offensive this year to limited objectives. Possibly they will leave the issue open for the moment, strike heavily at what they conceive to be the weakest point of the Allied front, and determine their future policy by the immediate results of that effort.

Indian Reforms.

By her magnificent contribution to the war India has established a large claim on the gratitude of the whole Empire. The work of her fighting men in France and Mesopotamia has done more for the fulfilment of her legitimate ambitions than thirty years of political agitation were able to do. India—or rather educated India—desires a far wider measure of self-government than she now enjoys. Her loyalty during the war, in spite of a very subtle campaign of German intrigue, has inspired a new faith in her ability and willingness to make a proper use of the privileges of self-government. The War Cabinet decided to acts upon that faith, and pledged itself to take substantial steps, as soon as possible, for the gradual development of self-governing institutions. Six months ago Mr. Montagu, the Secretary of State for India, went to that country with the object of consulting Indian opinion, both native and official; and his report, which is intended to be the basis of the new reforms, is published to-day. It is signed by the Viceroy, Lord Chelmsford, and its recommendations may, perhaps, be accepted as representing the greatest degree of Indian unanimity on questions of Indian government that has yet been reached. We print to-day a brief summary of the report of three hundred pages. Obviously we can comment on it only in the most general terms. The outstanding feature of the report is that may be described as its careful audacity. In principle it proposes to endow India with almost unlimited powers of self-government. In practice it proposes that the reforms shall be so gradual and so well guarded that any calamity which ignorance, over-zeal, or deliberate disloyalty may threaten can be countered at any stage of the advance. India is to be made responsible for the "progressive realisation" of her political desires, and she will be trusted in increasing measure accordingly as she shows herself worthy of the trust. The report sets forth, as a main purpose of the scheme of reform, the completion of the edifice of local self-government. Further responsibilities are to devolve upon the provincial legislatures, in which the elective element—elected on a franchise as broad as possible—is to prevail. The Viceregal Legislature will be divided into two Chambers, in one of which two-thirds of the members will be elected, while the other—the Council of State—will be composed of fifty members who, it is hoped, will acquire the dignity of "elder statesmen." The Executive Government in every Major Province is to consist of the Governor, with an Executive Council of two, one of whom shall be an Indian. A permanent Council of Princes will be formed for the consideration of the affairs of the native States. Furthermore—and this we regard as a very desirable innovation—a Select Committee of the House of Commons on Indian affairs will be established. It is manifest that Parliament cannot give serious thought to Mr. Montagu's far-reaching programme during the existence of the war, and that, even when the time for its consideration comes, progress must be slow and cautious. Parliament will study the scheme jealously, and will be sure to criticise any feature of it that seems to weaken the essential authority of the Imperial Government. Two things, however, are certain. The report in itself marks the beginning of a new chapter in Indian history, and its problems will be discussed at home in a spirit of sincere anxiety to satisfy the desires of loyal India.

France and Ireland.

For nearly four years now agricultural operations in France have been entirely conducted by old men, women, and children. They have ploughed and sowed and reaped, while the young and middle-aged men have been fighting in defence of their country; and the world knows how successful their work has been. Thanks to their devoted efforts, the area under tillage in France has not decreased, and the harvests have been abundant. Even land which is within range of the German artillery is cultivated. There are limits, however, to the endurance of even the splendid peasant women of France, and it is feared that without assistance they will be unable to save this year's crops. Two representatives of the French Government, Monsieur Ricard and the Reverend Abbé Flynn, parish priest of Suresnes, are at present in this country with a view to securing the services of Irish migratory labourers. At the dinner to which the visitors were entertained by Mr. T. P. Gill, on Thursday night, Sir Thomas Russell and Mr. Gill expressed sympathy with the object of their mission, but pointed out the urgent claim of Ireland on her own agricultural labourers for the present harvest. M. Ricard and his colleague stated that they had visited Donegal and Galway. We venture to think that they were astonished to see so many able-bodied men who are exempt from military service. By far the greater part of the French Army is drawn from the agricultural population, and the casualties among the farming community have been correspondingly heavy. The visitors expressed themselves as deeply gratified by the sympathy with France which they found in Ireland. French politeness is proverbial. There is only one way in which Irishmen can show practical sympathy with France in this fourth year of war—by helping the glorious French Army to drive the invader from their soil. Lord French has offered them an opportunity of doing so. If Irishmen will enlist in the required numbers, the French Government will be able to release some of its heroic fighting farmers to save their own crops.

CO. MONAGHAN ASSIZES.

THE PROVOST CONGRATULATED.

The County Monaghan Assizes were opened yesterday morning before Lord Justice Moloney in the Crown Court, and Mr. Justice Gordon in the Record Court. The Hon. and Rev. Dr. Mahaffy, Provost of Trinity College, High Sheriff for the county Monaghan, accompanied his Lordship on the bench in the Crown Court.

Addressing the Grand Jury, of whom Colonel Sir Joseph Leslie, D.L., was foreman, Lord Justice Moloney said he was very glad to tell them that their duties would be of an extremely light character. There were only small cases to be considered for their investigations. Turning to the general state of the county, his Lordship commented on the fact that since the Assizes there have been nine cases specially reported. None of those cases could be called of a serious character, and none of them was such as to seem to seriously affect the public peace and security of property. For the corresponding period of last year there were twelve cases, so there had been a decrease in the number of offences, and further, there had been a decrease really in their character, because none of the cases reported since the last Assizes can be described as very serious. He authorised the County Inspector to tell you that in his view, and in the view of the County Authorities he represents, your county continues to remain, but in a more remarkable character it has enjoyed for many years past. I will allow me, on behalf of my brother Judges, to tender to your distinguished High Sheriff our warmest congratulations on the great honour which His Majesty has conferred upon him in bestowing upon him the dignity of the Order of the British Empire. To those of us who have been educated under his influence it is a cause of very much gratification to us that to you, with whom he has been so closely associated for many years, it must be also a source of intense gratification. It is a great honour to himself, it is a great honour to his county, and it is well that he should know it is an honour fully appreciated by his fellow-countrymen.

INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC.

SIR CHARLES CAMERON'S ADVICE.

Sir Charles Cameron, Dublin Medical Superintendent Officer of Health, writes:—

I am sure that it would be desirable for the non-hospital establishments to keep open longer than usual in order to meet the enormously increased demand for medicines owing to the influenza epidemic. I have heard of patients going out into the open air under the impression that it would be beneficial. On the contrary, when one suddenly gets a bad headache or other symptom of influenza the first thing to do is at once to bed and stay there until the doctor says: "You may get up."

Inquiries made in authoritative quarters in London yesterday morning indicate that the epidemic shows no signs of abating. Some consolation for the situation may be gathered from the fact that, although the death-rate is low compared with other common complaints, the number of deaths in London during the week ending June 29 was 2,784, and it is of interest to note that a large percentage of the victims were between 20 and 40 years of age. In the corresponding week of last year only one death was registered as due to influenza in London.

It was decided yesterday to close the elementary schools of Newcastle. There have been many cases this week, the total being estimated between seven and eight thousand.

Nearly all the Birmingham schools and all the elementary schools in Barrow have been closed owing to the epidemic.

Owing to the prevalence of the influenza epidemic in Edinburgh, Dr. Maxwell Williamson, Medical Officer of Health, has issued a certificate closing forthwith all day and evening schools.

A Vienna telegram says:—Spanish sickness assumes formidable proportions in Vienna. Where the number of cases is estimated at about a thousand. Leipzig, Posen, and Stuttgart are also suffering. At Stuttgart the trains have stopped running in consequence of the number of drivers who have been ill.

THE IRISH FLAX INDUSTRY.

The King held a Privy Council at Buckingham Palace yesterday, when the chief business had relation to the labour difficulties which have arisen in connection with the flax industry in Ireland. The King signed a proclamation, the effect of which is to empower the Linen Board to submit to arbitration under the Munitions of War Act, 1915. The existence, or continuation, of the differences being prejudicial to the maintenance, transport, or supply of munitions.

"THE TWELFTH" DEMONSTRATIONS.

Our Belfast Correspondent learns that the Orange Lodge authorities in the city have received permission for the members to march in processional order to the various Twelfth of July anniversary Church Services to-morrow, and also to hold the usual demonstration on Friday next.

The Belfast shipyards will close for the annual holidays in connection with the "Twelfth" on Thursday next, and will not re-open until Monday, 22nd inst.

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
FRIDAY NIGHT.

The silver wedding celebration to-morrow will be of an imposing character, considering the times. The State procession from Buckingham Palace to St. Paul's Cathedral will revive the State uniforms and liveries so well known before the war. The King and Queen are certain to have a most enthusiastic welcome, for they have both grown very dear to the people. Their constant and steady sympathy with every form of suffering, their efforts to alleviate pain and sorrow, and their democratic movements among the people of all classes and conditions are recognised on every side. When they drive through London to-morrow with their family the people will express appreciation of these facts, and in no mean measure.

The anniversary of our entrance into the war on August 4th is to be more marked than on previous anniversaries. Falling as it does on Sunday, the day will be kept as a day of prayer, but other movements will also be initiated. The Lord Mayor of London, with the approval of the Prime Minister, is consulting the other Lord Mayors of the United Kingdom as to the best manner of marking the occasion. Nothing definite has yet been decided upon, but, it is understood, that steps will be taken to enable every town and village in the Kingdom to place on record its resolution to persevere with the war until victory crowns our arms.

The wonderful record of activity in the air published to-day gives point to the German demand that air raids on open towns shall cease, and the call upon the German Government to open negotiations with a view to such an understanding. When London and England was suffering for months from Zeppelin raids which we were unable to prevent or avenge, the German newspapers were filled with gloating descriptions, much exaggerated, of what we had to endure. Now that the turn of their own people has come, the same newspapers are protesting violently against this senseless murder of civilians. It is all too late now for repentance. I imagine that people here would sooner go through the Zeppelin raids again, rather than that Germany should escape the punishment her rulers have brought upon her.

Sir Auckland Geddes is to be asked on Monday whether new instructions have been issued to medical boards with reference to the grading of men from 43 to 51 years of age. It is probable that Sir Auckland Geddes will take the opportunity to announce the decisions now arrived at with regard to men coming under the new Military Service Act. The grading is to be changed, and it is understood that the Ministry of National Service will issue instructions to its representatives that they are to act very carefully in dealing with the middle-aged men. Reports from various quarters confirm the view that many of the new military age really fit for the Army are "C" men are few in number. These few, mostly men used to an out-of-doors life, get "windy" in their new conditions, but the majority are finding the life very trying. The Army Medical officers do all that is possible to make life comfortable for them, but the task is not a very pleasing one.

The rationing of coal and light during the coming winter has set some active minds to work with a view to providing fuel that will not come under any rationing scheme. A greater use, it is suggested, shall be made of peat obtainable in many places in England, and more in little used. A body of influential men representing the coal trade is about to submit to the War Cabinet and the House of Commons a plan for the special preparation of coal whereby the heat may be nearly doubled, and the cost reduced by more than one half. PLATFORM AND STAGE.

The theatres of Paris and of London have been influenced by Independence Day. America, once separated from us by a thousand leagues, is with us now. War's magic has abolished space and chme and race, and made all sons of freedom one in aim and kin. And so it happens that Americans who dwell with us to-day are not abroad, but in the truest sense at home. Their spirit is attuned to ours. The qualities which differentiate us all are but as those which differentiate the notes that go to the completion of effective harmony. No wonder then that our theatres should welcome the Americans that are within our gates; for no writers else have our great artists been so cordially received or made so thoroughly at home as in New York, and in the other cities that are as much at heart in the United States. We had no play in the theatres of Paris or of London which might signalise with fit dramatic note the wedding of America and Europe; such plays are not created by an act of will. But we had something better—that warm greeting of the heart which art indeed may emulate, but which no art can summon into being, since its well-spring lies in thankfulness of soul. So it was that in the Comédie Française French artists played, as only they can play Corneille's or Horace's work on the stage well loved by them. And as a special tribute to America the night of Miss Edward's appearance, together with Poe's ringing verses on "The Bells," in London every theatre and hall was open to the band and song and speech of the bells of the young America. The chosen place of pilgrimage, however, was St. Dunstan's Theatre. There Miss Anderson held court with her country's ambassadors and sailors as courtiers, and right royally she entertained them. Old play-goers will remember her as the most beautiful of Juliets. On Independence Night she played the Balcony scene with Mr. Matheson Lang as Romeo. Of course with Mr. Lang's accustomedness, Soldiers and sailors filled the stalls and pit, and the gallery was crowded her to the echo, and Miss Anderson, the lady which was provider of Miss Anderson, the lady that gave her birth, or that which she has made that gave her birth, or that which she has made her home. She, more than any living actress, typified the union of race and our own. typified the union of race and our own. Her father, an officer in the Confederate Army, fell upon the field. Her husband, Mr. Sherman, fell upon the field, in later years, and as they told their battles once again they spoke of Mary Anderson as the symbol of peace. So may she stand as the symbol of a union that must stay elected by the people of the world's history, which change the course of the world's history, which union gives us hope of a still nobler peace.

The Dublin Theatre Royal Hippodrome announces a variety entertainment for next week. Hilda Glyndon will be heard in her latest successes, while Tom Waters and Eddie Morris are to appear in "The Comedy "turn," Trio of equilibrists, Edgley and Dawe, ventriloquist; Jackson dancers, Rose and Moss, duettistes; Jackson and Marie comedians; Tom Stuart, in dramatic and burlesque impressions; and Sam Barton and his Dogs complete the list. Next biscope will show the latest pictures.

Mr. P. J. Bourke's provincial company will appear next week at the Queen's Theatre, Dublin, in the Irish drama, "The Shuiler's Child," by Mr. Whitwell. The play is by the late director of Mr. Ira Allen. Included in Mr. Bourke's company are Miss Betty Byrne and Miss Clare Arthurs. There will be traditional Irish dances, and songs.

Twenty-four new performers, in addition to last week's pro-winners, will contribute to the programme of the Hippodrome during a concert at the Queen's Theatre, Dublin.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

IRELAND AND THE WAR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—There is one aspect of Ireland's position which I think has not received the emphasis it deserves. In his letter published on Monday, Mr. Massey, the Irish Premier of New Zealand, very truly puts the case that "in who refuses very truly puts the case that "in who refuses to assist the Allies, by doing so assists Germany." The American and English papers and public men seem to be taking more and more notice of Ireland's present attitude; and, one would gather, regard it as the key to the future with regard to military, naval, and national requirements. The practical cessation of imports of foreign timber, the provision of extra packing cases for the export of the stocks of standing timber has taken place during the past two years such as never before has been known in the history of the country; and, as it must continue, probably at a higher rate, until some time after the war, it follows that the actual point of exhaustion must be reached sooner or later—particularly as, at the outbreak of war, the timber resources of Ireland were only a small percentage of what they should have been for the size and population of the country.

An Ireland with large tracts of flourishing forests on her mountain sides, with smaller blocks of woodlands in the more thickly populated rural districts, yielding raw material to innumerable local wood-working industries, and proper shelter belts systematically arranged for the protection of homesteads, cattle, and crops, is the dream of those forestry experts who have the interests at heart. All like, of course, must be the work of a State development scheme, and from our straitened financial resources I am afraid it will take a long time to materialise.

Immediate measures on a smaller scale are imperative, however. How many landowners are there who will voluntarily replant their estates? Everyone knows that they are receiving exceptionally high prices for their timber, but from past experience I very much fear that the gutted woods will remain in the same condition as the timber merchant leaves them—an eyesore to the present generation, a curse to posterity, and a blot upon the administrative capacity of the country. Left in that condition the land will yield barely anything, which, to be charitable, can only be described as utterly deplorable from an economic point of view.

Many of the landowners have never spent a penny on growing the timber, although I presume most of them pay to the Government 5s. in the pound on the sales as tax on unearned income. Is there anything drastic in suggesting that they should be compelled to spend at least one-fifth of the purchase money they have received for timber since the outbreak of war upon replanting under Government supervision during the first five or six years after the war? From a conservative point of view, I estimate that at least £750,000 will have been paid to landowners throughout Ireland from the outbreak of war up to the end of the present year. If £150,000 were invested by them under a proper system of re-afforestation, it would mean the planting up of 25,000 to 30,000 acres, which, given fair play, would result in producing a crop of timber in seventy years' time worth at present values, anywhere from £200 to £250 per acre.

It will be seen from this statement that it is to the landowners' own interests to replant, but there is a doubt if the majority of them will do anything without outside pressure being brought to bear. At the same time, it is only fair and just to give credit to that minority of public-spirited landowners who have successfully pursued a system of annual replanting, but whose efforts have been retarded during the course of the war through shortage of labour, and, at the same time, in many cases, absence at the front on their country's service.—Yours, etc.,

J. H. NEWMAN.

LAND FOR IRISH SOLDIERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I suppose that this Irish soldiers have few friends in Parliament. The following extract from a speech of a Nationalist representative will explain the situation. According to Hansard, Mr. McKean said: "That brings us to the scheme of the Government for giving land to soldiers disabled in the war. I need say nothing on that point after the speech we have just heard, because there is no doubt about it that the senior member of the University of Dublin riddled and finally disposed of that scheme."

I think it only right that the interests of the soldier should be looked after, and committees will be formed shortly in Belfast and Dublin. Any persons desirous of co-operating will kindly send me their names.—Yours, etc.,

LAW REPORTS.

Dundalk Injunction.—In the Chancery Division, before the Master of the Rolls, in the motions, before the Master of the Rolls, in the motions, Patrick Joseph Murphy v. Peter Callan, case of Patrick Joseph Murphy v. Dundalson and Mr. Poole (instructed by Messrs. Donnelly and Coulter) applied on behalf of the plaintiff for an interlocutory injunction to restrain the defendant, from trespassing upon the lands of Haggardstown, now in the possession of the plaintiff, who resides at Blackrock, Co. Louth. The lands were leased by the plaintiff in 1909 under a five years' letting agreement, and since the expiration of the term he had continued in possession at a yearly rent of £12. Since June, 1917, the defendant had actively interfered with the plaintiff in the use and enjoyment of the lands. The Master of the Rolls granted an injunction. Mr. Sainsbury (instructed by Mr. R. O'Connell) appeared for the defendant.

Plucking Flowers.—In the King's Bench Division, before Mr. Justice O'Connor, in the case of Ashmore v. Callaghan, Mr. Russell (instructed by Ashmore v. Callaghan and Co.) applied on behalf of Messrs. W. G. Johnston and Co. for an order restraining the action of the defendant (as an order committing the action of the Recorder of Dublin. The plaintiff, Eileen Ashmore, of 87 North Circular road, Dublin, brought the action against Francis Callaghan, cattle dealer, and Anne Callaghan, his wife, both of 68 Grange, and Anne Callaghan, his wife, both of 68 North Circular road, Dublin, for compensation for alleged assault on the female defendant. The dispute arose over an allegation that the plaintiff was in the habit of plucking flowers in defendants' garden. The words shocking flowers in defendants' garden. The words shocking flowers in defendants' garden. The words of complained of were, "You are a brass-faced little thief. Get out of here's disgrace to your house, and your carryings on in Calara road are a disgrace. The words also charged the plaintiff with theft, and she was not only vulgar abuse. There was no imputation against Francis Callaghan, cattle dealer, and took him into custody, and refused to permit him to return to the applicant's home. An action for £100 was claimed.

Crimes Act Venue.—Before the Master of the Rolls, in the King's Bench Division, Mr. Cooper (instructed by the Chief Crown Solicitor) applied in the case of David Kent, of Fermoy, to change the venue of the Crimes Act case from the City of Cork. He also applied for an order under the Crimes Act that the case be tried by a jury, and not by the Master of the Rolls granted the application.

Increase of Rent Act.—In the King's Bench Division, before Mr. Justice O'Connor, in the case of Farrell v. Murray, Mr. Sainsbury (instructed by Mr. C. J. Murray) applied on behalf of the defendant for an order to set aside a decree made by the defendant for the recovery of rent of a dwelling-house in Calara. Counsel said the rent of the house in Calara. Counsel said the rent of the house was £25 per annum, and that the defendant in 1917 entered into an agreement to take the house at £45. The defendant failed to pay the rent, and he was served with a notice to quit. He failed to give up possession after the notice to quit, and judgment was marked against him for £11 8s. Execution, however, was not issued. Instead of a rental of £45 a year, but counsel contended, under the Increase of Rent Act, he could only be charged £25 per annum from the first, and that any additional rent was irrecoverable. In these circumstances the defendant was entitled to a decree. Mr. Pringle (instructed by Messrs. A. and J. Goodbody) appeared for the plaintiff. He said that the judgment was merely £1 5s. in excess of the £25 per annum. The Act, he contended, did not apply where there had been no increase of rates and no structural alterations, there could be no increase of rent, and the defendant was not entitled to the benefit of the Act. Mr. Justice O'Connor held that as there had been no increase of rates and no structural alterations, there could be no increase of rent, and he accordingly reduced the amount of the judgment to £25.

Queen's County Land Case.—In the Chancery Division, before the Master of the Rolls, a settlement was arrived at in the case of William Phelan, Ballyroan, Queen's County, and Mr. Daniel Kennedy, Abbeyleix, farmer, in which the former claimed £400 for certain stock at Ballykennedy, containing 54as. 2r. 10p., and which stock he alleged had been sold by the latter, now in the possession of the plaintiff, who resides at Blackrock, Co. Louth. The lands were leased by the plaintiff in 1909 under a five years' letting agreement, and since the expiration of the letting agreement, and since the possession at a yearly term he had continued in possession at the yearly rent of £12. Since June, 1917, the defendant had actively interfered with the plaintiff in the use and enjoyment of the lands. The Master of the Rolls granted an injunction. Mr. Sainsbury (instructed by Mr. R. O'Connell) appeared for the defendant.

Plucking Flowers.—In the King's Bench Division, before Mr. Justice O'Connor, in the case of Ashmore v. Callaghan, Mr. Russell (instructed by Ashmore v. Callaghan and Co.) applied on behalf of Messrs. W. G. Johnston and Co. for an order restraining the action of the defendant (as an order committing the action of the Recorder of Dublin. The plaintiff, Eileen Ashmore, of 87 North Circular road, Dublin, brought the action against Francis Callaghan, cattle dealer, and Anne Callaghan, his wife, both of 68 Grange, and Anne Callaghan, his wife, both of 68 North Circular road, Dublin, for compensation for alleged assault on the female defendant. The dispute arose over an allegation that the plaintiff was in the habit of plucking flowers in defendants' garden. The words shocking flowers in defendants' garden. The words of complained of were, "You are a brass-faced little thief. Get out of here's disgrace to your house, and your carryings on in Calara road are a disgrace. The words also charged the plaintiff with theft, and she was not only vulgar abuse. There was no imputation against Francis Callaghan, cattle dealer, and took him into custody, and refused to permit him to return to the applicant's home. An action for £100 was claimed.

Crimes Act Venue.—Before the Master of the Rolls, in the King's Bench Division, Mr. Cooper (instructed by the Chief Crown Solicitor) applied in the case of David Kent, of Fermoy, to change the venue of the Crimes Act case from the City of Cork. He also applied for an order under the Crimes Act that the case be tried by a jury, and not by the Master of the Rolls granted the application.

Increase of Rent Act.—In the King's Bench Division, before Mr. Justice O'Connor, in the case of Farrell v. Murray, Mr. Sainsbury (instructed by Mr. C. J. Murray) applied on behalf of the defendant for an order to set aside a decree made by the defendant for the recovery of rent of a dwelling-house in Calara. Counsel said the rent of the house was £25 per annum, and that the defendant in 1917 entered into an agreement to take the house at £45. The defendant failed to pay the rent, and he was served with a notice to quit. He failed to give up possession after the notice to quit, and judgment was marked against him for £11 8s. Execution, however, was not issued. Instead of a rental of £45 a year, but counsel contended, under the Increase of Rent Act, he could only be charged £25 per annum from the first, and that any additional rent was irrecoverable. In these circumstances the defendant was entitled to a decree. Mr. Pringle (instructed by Messrs. A. and J. Goodbody) appeared for the plaintiff. He said that the judgment was merely £1 5s. in excess of the £25 per annum. The Act, he contended, did not apply where there had been no increase of rates and no structural alterations, there could be no increase of rent, and the defendant was not entitled to the benefit of the Act. HIGH PRICE FOR STANDING TIMBER.

On Thursday, in Cork, Messrs. Wood and Son put up for sale by auction, on the Cuilhurst estate at Ballycommane. The property was offered in 18 lots, and the sale, which was attended by a large number of timber merchants, extended over the whole day. The bidding was very brisk, and competition was keen, and the prices realised were considered very satisfactory. The highest price realised was £1,000 for a lot of timber containing 54as. 2r. 10p., and which stands on the lands of Haggardstown, Dundalk, now in the possession of the plaintiff, who resides at Blackrock, Co. Louth. The lands were leased by the plaintiff in 1909 under a five years' letting agreement, and since the expiration of the term he had continued in possession at a yearly rent of £12. Since June, 1917, the defendant had actively interfered with the plaintiff in the use and enjoyment of the lands. The Master of the Rolls granted an injunction. Mr. Sainsbury (instructed by Mr. R. BOUNDARIES.

The whole life of Sir Thomas Holdich has been occupied with questions of boundaries and boundary making, and his new book is a welcome contribution to a subject which is always fascinating, and is especially so at the present moment. We want to know the reasons why nationalities assert so passionately that certain geographical features belong to them. Sir Thomas Holdich studies these problems from the point of view of geography and geology. His angle gives him an approach which is not altogether common. He is most concerned with the Near East, though in this connection he has an illuminating section on the interest of Italy in the Balkan problem. Perhaps, the outstanding feature of the book is the attention he stowed on the Czechs and Slavs.

The only weakness which we note in the book is the tendency of Sir Thomas Holdich to assume that the reader is as well informed as himself. For example, when he is discussing the origin of the Slavs he simply refers to the circumstance that they came from far, swarming southwards in successive waves until they overran the greater part of the Near East in the early centuries of our Era. Had he added the information that the Slavs were originally an Eastern race, and had he given a few details of the process of swarming, we think he would have aided the reader in the understanding of one of the most difficult of problems. He throws out remarks that the Bulgars are not Slav but Hun, that Bulgaria is not therefore a true Slav State, and the like. This assumes that the reader is well informed and can supply the missing information for himself. Huxley once asked Faraday how much he might assume that his audience knew, and the latter replied with emphasis, "Nothing." We commend this advice

SPORTING NEWS.

PHŒNIX PARK MEETING—THIS DAY.

To-day's programme at Phœnix Park is an unusually strong one, containing as it does eight races, and these include the Irish Breeders' Produce Stakes of 1,000 sovs. and the Arnott Plate, in which some of our best two-year-olds are engaged. The ground at the various training centres has been so hard as a result of the protracted drought that trainers have been somewhat handicapped in their operations, and as a consequence fields this afternoon may not be unduly large, but the sport should attain to a very interesting standard. Selections:—

Weight for Age Plate—Le Connetable.
Open Mile Handicap—His Nibs.
Selling Nursery Plate—Arthur O'Leary or Fiona Lass.
Arnott Plate—Hunter's selected.
Breeders' Produce Stakes—Granard or Cahir.
Nursery Handicap—Miss Glad Eyes.
Farmleigh Plate—Outrun or Faricena.
Country Plate—Warwick; if absent, Sugarey Sam.

FINANCIAL NEWS

DUBLIN STOCK EXCHANGE.

With the exception of almost general dealing in Government Funds there was a good deal of stagnation about dealings on Change yesterday, as is usual at the week-end. The feature was the continued strength of Marconi Wireless Telegraph shares on London buying orders, otherwise the various sections were practically without incident.

LONDON STOCKS FIRM.

The Stock Exchange yesterday presented a quiet, but firm, appearance. Week-end influences were responsible for a little profit-taking here and hardening here and there, and the war news continued to be of a satisfactory character. In the case of money was at some assistance to the general tone. Restricted mere particularly wood the domestic sections. Gilt-edged issues recovered a little. There was not much sustained activity in the Industrial and Miscellaneous markets, but, however, were steady, and even firm in places. In the Oil section there were several quiet features of a point. Indian Government issues were also steady. Rubbers, Tea and Nitrate shares were unchanged. Local Loans Stock were other good stocks.

Argentine Sixes and the group displayed unsteadiness on the reports of the Argentine harvest and confusion at Buenos Ayres. Egyptians were steady at their recent good improvement. Among South American Fives Peruvians showed to advantage. Brazilians were more stable, reflecting the check to the recent recovery in exchange. Mexican Sixes were dull and weak.

Changes—Rises: French Loan, 1 to 61½; Russian Bonds, 1 to 5½; Peruvian Cert., 1 to 6½; Russian Fives, 1 to 2½.

RAILS FAIRLY STEADY.—The Home Railway market showed no loss interesting features which was still maintained by the influence of the Government's recommendations. Quiet, however, showed occasional irregularity on week-end profit-taking. Underground were the most successfully cheerful feature. Great Easterns did not retain a slight forenoon gain, and Southern shares were also a shade easier. Dealings in North Eastern fell away. Among Trunk and Trade Stocks only small changes occurred.

Canadian Pacifics did not vary. Grand Trunk Ordinary were barely steady, but Third Preference there was not much realising to depress. Mexican Rails ceased quietly without change. Rosarios were dealt in moderately among Argentine Rails on lack of investment. Brazilian Rails showed some improved tendency.

Changes—Rises: Caledonian Def., 1 to 2; Great Central Def., 1 to 2; Metropolitan, 1 to 2; Midland Def., 1 to 2; Great Western, 1 to 2; North Eastern Def., 1 to 2; Lancashire and Yorks., 1 to 2; Midland Def., 1 to 2½; Grand Trunk Guar., 1 to 2; Do. 1st Pref., 1 to 2; Do. 2nd Pref., 1 to 2; Southern, 1 to 2½. INDUSTRIALS IRREGULAR.—Commercial and Industrial Securities met last attention, but general firmness was maintained, and to-week-end investments. Among Caterers, Aerated Bread and Lyons were both unchanged. Tea Trusts, on amalgamation negotiations. Liptons made a dull feature of 6s. and closed 6s. easier at 6s. 3d. There was great activity among Courtaulds, and the textile group, as a whole, was firmly maintained on recent improvement. There were Rayons, Linens, Jutes, Cottons, Woollens, and Lloyds Bank, at 89d, was rather weaker. Cortis fell 1s. to 3s. 3d. Rubber Shares, on reports of to-
